

TV Show/Movie Review

The Office (U.S)

The Office is a comedy TV series about a group of office workers and their hilarious misadventures working for the failing paper company, Dunder Mifflin. Starring: John Krasinski, Jenna Fischer, Steve Carell and Rainn Wilson. The Office was a remake of the U.K Office that aired from 2001-2003, with two seasons. The Office (U.S) first aired in 2005 until 2013, with a total of nine seasons. Its rated PG-14.

This show makes you fall in love with the characters and laugh until your face turns blue. It has a very dry humor and the show is filmed in a documentary style. Even though the shows a few years old now, it's still very popular. The Office has an 81% score on Rotten Tomatoes and 8.9/10 on IMDb.

When I first started watching The Office, I honestly didn't understand why people loved it so much. But after a few episodes I quickly fell in love with the characters. Michael Scott (the office regional manager) played by Steve Carell is the funniest character I've ever watched on TV. I give The Office (U.S) a 10/10 rating.
